RENÉ MUELLER BASS

celebrates the coolest instrument in the world with new single "For the Love of Bass".

German bassist René Mueller has released his new single "For the Love of Bass", which is a tribute to the electric bass and its idols. The smooth jazz / smooth funk song is available on all streaming platforms and has been celebrated by the online bass community "scottsbasslessons.com."

"For the Love of Bass" is more than just a song, it's a philosophy and a passion that René Mueller Bass expresses through his music. He shows why he does what he loves: playing bass and equally paying respect and tribute to his idols on this instrument. Marcus Miller, Victor Wooten, Federico Malaman, Richard Bona, Stanley Clarke and many others come to mind.

I've always wanted to write a song that expresses my love for the bass and shows people how versatile and expressive this instrument can be.

INFO

René Mueller Bass is a bass player, but also a composer. Since he coaxed the first low notes out of his instrument, he has been active in various bands. But his own compositions never really found their place there. That's why he decided to go his own way and present his music as a solo artist.

The online bass community "scottsbasslessons.com", to which René Mueller feels very connected as a former bass teacher and lifetime member, presented an excerpt of the song "For the Love of Bass" as part of the "Featured Member" format on its social media channels with consistently positive feedback.
